of the United States official mission. The list includes the individual's name, the names and ages of his children, home address and telephone number, and place and address of employment, including business telephone and extension.

3. There is a covering memorandum to the listing written presumably by the collector of the information whose name is illegible. The memorandum, addressed simply to "Comrade," states that the attached list is not complete since it lacks approximately 200 names, but that an attempt will be made to add to the list as much as possible. The author assures that further data on the names cited can be obtained if desired. It is noted in the memorandum that most of the people on the list are not in Argentina permanently, and that efforts will be made to keep the list current. The memorandum refers to a booklet containing photographs of the rich which may be of interest.
